"Now" has come again for us
Age has made us see
That always comes a certain day
When starting has to be!

We have
so much.
We've done
so much.
We are
so much.
We'll be
so much.
We'll do
so much.
We'll miss
so much.

"Now" is gone forevermore
Time has made us see
That always comes a certain day
When ending has to be.

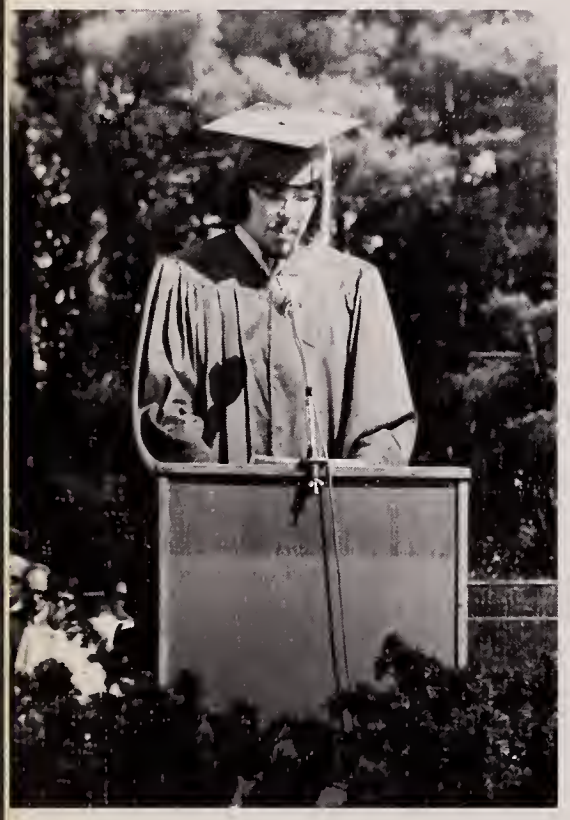
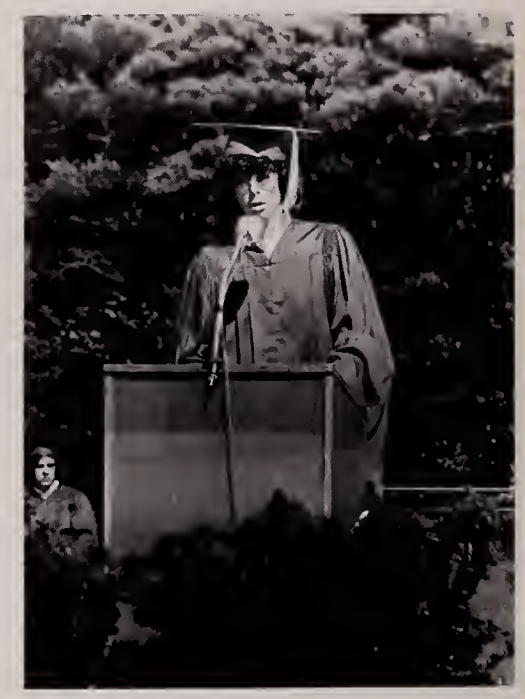
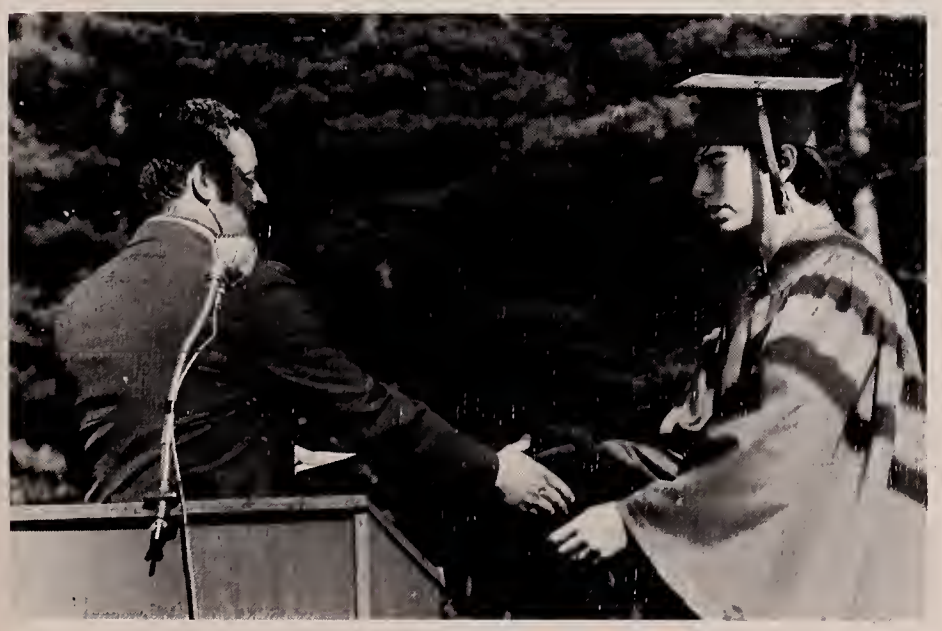
GRADUATION







VALEDICTORY

The Class of 1972 first entered school on September 7, 1960. Since that first day, we have seen many, many changes in this ever-changing world. One such example of extreme and almost unbelievable growth and change is, I think, an excellent parallel to the growth and change in the Class of '72. I am speaking of the manned space effort in the United States. How does this program parallel the growth of our class?

When the Class of 1972 first entered school on that September morning in 1960 MANNED space flight was still a dream in the minds of scientists and on the drawing boards of the engineers. Remember, Sputnik I had been launched just three years prior to our entrance into school, but there had been no manned flights until the Class of 1972 was in the first grade.

Twelve years ago today, there had not been one single person in space. It wasn't until April 12, 1961, that Yuri Gagarin of the Soviet Union became the first human ever launched into space. It was only eleven years ago, last month, on May 5th, 1961, that Alan Shepard made the first American space flight. It hardly seems possible that in the last fifteen years, man could have gained enough knowledge about space technology to send men to the Moon and back eight times, actually landing men on the Moon five times. In the eleven years following Alan Shepard's sub-orbital flight, scientists around the world have continued to explore, experiment, and learn about space flight. It is amazing how much knowledge has been gained in those eleven years. The American space effort has grown from Admiral Shephard's fifteen minute flight of only a few hundred miles to eight Apollo missions to the Moon and back, journeys of millions of miles and of many days. Learning never has and probably never will stop in the field of space exploration.

In fact, learning never really stops in any field, or in any person. People, all of us, continue to learn throughout our lives, from the day we are born to the day we die. The Class of 1972 is no exception. We are leaving Wilmington High School today, but our leaving does not mean an end to our education. For many of us today is the end of our formal education. For others of us, those going to college or other specialized schools, today is merely another step in or formal education. Every one of us, college or no college, will always continue to learn.

Although today ends twelve long years of school, our public education has actually only skimmed the surface of what we will learn the rest of our lives. High School has taught us how to learn. Graduation is a Commencement, a beginning. It is not the end of education; it is merely the beginning.

Some of us will enter the service; some of us will go directly into working positions; others, like myself, will enter college in the fall. We may go in two hundred and fifty different directions — I don't know — but one thing is for sure. We will never stop learning. We will continue to explore, experiment, and learn as the space scientists have done during the past decade and one half.

Richard Keane

SALUTATORY

Children of the Grave

Throughout the last few years, many changes have taken place in the world, most for the good but, unfortunately, many for the bad. This poem by Kendrew Lascilles seems to be depicting a superior thing surveying the now dead human race, dead because of the few bad changes.

When all the laughter dies in sorrow
And the tears have risen to a flood
When all the wars have found a cause
In human wisdom and in blood
Do you think the eye will blink
Do you think they'll curse the madness
Do you think they'll even think?

When all the great galactic systems
Sigh to a frozen halt in space
Do you think there will be some remnant
Of beauty of the human race?
Do you think there will be a vestige
Or a sniffle or a cosmic tear?
Do you think a greater thinking thing
Will give a damn that man was here?

The steps by which this race destroyed itself were probably the same ones through which we are going today: 1. Progress, 2. Man vs. Man, 3. The End.

The progress step is easy to see. Throughout history man has produced more and more powerful instruments of death and destruction. Up until today, where we have bombs that can destroy entire countries and kill millions of people.

The man vs. man stage of the destruction has now become twofold. Not only is man fighting himself by now we are destroying nature. If the air we breathe and the water we drink become too polluted, the final stage will become reality.

Today, we are only as far as the second stage of man vs. man and man vs. nature. But if we don't do something fast, the final line of this song, written by Iommi-Ward-Butler-Osbourne, could come true.

Revolution in their minds — the children start to march
Against the world they have to live in.
Oh! the hate that's in their hearts.
They're tired of being pushed around and told just what to do.
They'll fight the world until they've won
And love comes flowing through.

Children of tomorrow live in tears that fall today
Will the sunrise of tomorrow bring in peace in any way
Must the world live in the shadow of atomic fear
Can they win the fight for peace or will they disappear?

So you children of the world, listen to what I say
If you want a better place to live in spread the words today
Show the world that love is still alive you must be brave
Or you children of today are children of the grave.

Robert Hogg

CLASS ESSAY

Competition and co-operation are two forces responsible for much of the progress in the world today. Both are very pronounced in our society. Competition, striving for superiority, has become engraved in the minds of all Americans. Co-operation, a joint effort between parties, has also proven itself a successful asset. Even though each has hopefully the same end result, progress, the method used in attaining that end is quite different.

Although thoughts may differ, the idea of competition in itself is not necessarily a bad one. Competition stimulates one to strive for goals beyond one's reach, to exceed one's limitations, and to gain confidence in one's personal accomplishments. Moreover, both self-respect and self-esteem can result from competition. This is especially true of the healthiest type of competition, competition with one's self. But what about competition between two or more people? It is here that competition may cease to become a constructive force. In the effort to out do one's rival, one's competitor may become one's enemy. Thus, instead of striving for the goal, one becomes obsessed with supressing one's adversary. Rather than both parties prospering it becomes a question of the opponents pushing one another down rather than pulling one another forward. In this case, obviously, everyone loses.

Co-operation, on the other hand, need not result in the stifling of one or more of the parties involved. Instead the joint effort relieves the pressure on any one individual by combining the talents of all. Thus co-operation can save a great deal of unnecessary repetition of efforts, as ideas which are shared can be added to the total as they are formulated, rather than being selfishly retained in an attempt to rise above one's opponents. The idea of co-operation is, however, far from perfect. Its major deficiency is that it may result in one's becoming a parasite, a non-functioning member who contributes nothing and reduces the efficiency of the whole group. In addition co-operation lacks individual reward which could serve as a possible source of motivation. It does however replace this with a certain team spirit.

In today's society, much of the emphasis is being shifted from competition to co-operation. Master craftsmen are disappearing as they are replaced by mass production's assembly lines. In hopes of promoting co-operation rather than competition between nations, trips to both China and Russia by President Nixon have resulted in agreements to work together for the advancement of medicine, science, and space exploration. But, in the world of today, competition cannot be forgotten or eliminated. Its presence in the business world, for example, results in better products and better service.

Competition and co-operation are two important ingredients in the recipe of life, but care must be taken. A future of progress and advancement lies in finding the proper balance between the two. An excess of competition may make life bitter, as a result of vengence and spite, while a shortage of cooperation may make life tasteless, for joys that are shared multiply. But with the right amounts of each, one's life and future can be both a rich and fulfilling experience.

CLASS HISTORY

As we entered Wilmington High School (was it really only four years ago?) our class had two things in common: we couldn't find our way through the building, and we had a class advisor who couldn't find the top of his desk. Sometime during that first year, as we were learning our way around, we managed to elect, with Mr. Kelley's help, our class officer: Ed Gillis, president; Linda Lockheart, vice-president; Lauren Woller, secretary; Laureen Woller, treasurer; Muriel Kindred, Student Council Representative.

Beginning our sophomore year right we elected Steve Lawrensen, president; Julie Marr, vice-president; Michele Elia, secretary; Marilee Cavanaugh, treasurer. We also managed to elect our Student Council Representatives: Ron Colbert and Fred Campbell and to sponsor a dance.

As we moved into our junior year, we became a fairly active class under the leadership of our class officers: Frank Simmons, president; Mike Rounds, vice-president; Joanne Rooney, secretary and originator of the "Hey Man" a newsletter to keep us informed about our class; Maureen O'Donoghue, treasurer and the newly added Executive Board of Rosemary Bransfield, Marilee Cavanaugh, Cathy Gillis, Linda Lockheart, Peggy McNamara, Anne Novak and Joe Scifo. Our Student Council Representatives were Ron Colbert, Fred Campbell, Richard Gustafson, Steve Tower and Sven Wiberg.

Among our activities that year were a roller skating party at Wal-lex Arena in March, and a car wash that left most of the workers cleaner than the cars. The Junior Prom, "We've only Just Begun," was held at Rolling Green in Andover. Junior Week was highlighted by our parade from Weinbergs to the High School that did a great job of disrupting traffic to the possible delight of the the affected motorists; as well as the Junior Banquet and capped by the Junior Variety Show entitled "Kelley's Heroes" held Friday and Saturday night was a big success. Mike Harrington was chosen as our school's representative to Boys' State and we chose Jamesway as our class photographer. To top off the year we held a beach party the last day of school.

As we started our senior year only too familiar with the building and with our class advisor, Mr. Kelley, who still cannot find the top of his desk, we elected Tom McGinley, president; Carol Cipriani, vice-president; Rosemary Bransfield, secretary; Maureen O'Donoghue, treasurer and the Executive Board: Richard Buck, Peggy McNamara, Pat Nee, Anne Novak, Dave O'Rourke, Mike Sevrin and Frank Simmons. Our Student Council Representatives were Fred Campbell, Ron Colbert, Loretta Fredrickson, Richard Gustafson and Sven Wiberg.

Our activities included the Spurlows, a music group; a dance; with a dance and car wash still to be held. The Senior Class Prom, "Castles in the Sky," is to be held at Castle Hill, Ipswich in June followed by the moment we've all been waiting for . . . Graduation.

CLASS

As No-Man descends the steps leading to the cellar of W.H.S., he finds himself amidst some strange and puzzling reminders of the Class of '72. He ventures forth into a melange of torn draperies, old boards, and wooden stairs — the very ones that were used to construct the set of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Carefully, he makes his way through the debris, searching for his destiny — an old wooden chest that is rumored to contain the last will and testament of the class of '72. Legend has it that, in an effort to forget the antics and capers of those graduating seniors more completely, Mr. McMahon and his ever-faithful protege, Mr. Garrett, skillfully hid the chest from view, hoping that no one would ever dare to seek it out. They even took turns guarding the chest from would-be discoverers, until they were sure that their secret was safe. But now, No-Man has come forth to find the treasure and make the document public knowledge.

With determination, he finds the prize (hidden in the corner, of course) and moves quickly to open it. As he pushes away the cobwebs, he finds himself bewildered at first. The chest is practically empty; all that remains now of a once glorious class are a few representative reminders — the head of an ass, a nearly empty ledger book (the type used to record never collected class dues), a few empty beer bottles and cans, and — under them — a piece of paper! Excitedly, he lifts the paper from its coffin and attempts to read the handwriting. Darkness surrounds him, but he manages to decipher the following words of intense wisdom: "Hey, Man! This is the Last Will and Testament of the Class of 1972. Continue reading at your own risk."

He moves down the crumpled page to read each legacy, and he eagerly begins to read aloud: Richard Allen leaves a pen and his basketball scorebook; Jeanette Arsenault leaves the even parallel bars to Paula Winters, with pleasure; Ralph Barden leaves the taxi service to and from school to his brothers; Arthur Bibeau leaves his first chest hair; Mary Ann Bimbo leaves all her lousy essays to Mrs. Cronin; Gale Boyden leaves Michael Harrington one partially sat on goose egg, compliments of U. Mass., and one "ringy-dingy"; Rosemary Bransfield leaves a photo, hair curlers and the memories of France; Holly Brennan bequeathes all her chemistry labs and burnt frizzies to Sheila, Bruce, Amy and other ignorami; Kathi Brennan leaves the "Gene experience" to her sister Debbie, and, with Nancy Phillips, Mr. DiSarcina and his date counseling service to the remainder of the Pepsi Generation; Gary Burt leaves behind all the apathetic conservatives for the school to deal with; Bob Bush leaves one hemorrhoid to his very favorite person, a certain member of the administration; Cheryl Campbell leaves Scott Robert to the class of 1990, her car to any junior wishing to drive dangerously, and Mr. Kelley's windows . . . closed!

Gayle Case leaves reservations for lunch at Jack-in-the-Box to her two sisters; Mel Cavanaugh leaves her Buttercup cheers to Amy and the gang for all future National Buttercup Days, and a copy of her new book entitled "Learn to Twirl in One Week or Less" to future cheerleaders who get the shaft from their coach; Carol Cipriani leaves one box of No-Doze to next year's Italian classes to combat the human sleeping pill and Mr. Kelley's jokes to anyone, absolutely anyone, who can listen to them without making a face; Ron Colbert leaves a large appetite to anyone with hungry horrors, a one year's supply of overchewed sugarless gum, an "Ecology Now" sticker, and a "Diet-Right" book to Miss Dadoly; Heather Copp leaves Shakespeare, poetry analysis, and grammer chapters 6-10 to Mrs. Mindell.

Kenneth Corum leaves all of his high explosives to his partner in crime, Mike Kaminski; David Dalton leaves one photo-type setter to the Graphic Arts Dept.; Marcel Deveau leaves "the Zapper" and one slightly zapped screwdriver; Dave Doucette leaves his chauffeur's license, hat, and coat to anyone; Ray Dudley leaves the "good" piano to anyone who is tone deaf; Valerie Farrell leaves her gym locker # 125 to her sister Heidi; Donna Ferrara leaves patience for all her friends to get through high school, as she has done; Loretta Frederickson leaves DARIMALOME to anyone who thinks he knows what it means; Larry Gallagher leaves the wig he wore in the Senior Class Play to a very needy member of the administration.

Stephanie Gates leaves all her good marks and a bottle of tranquilizers to Mrs. Mindell; Liz Godzyk leaves all her beat up goalie pads to Bertie Pilcher, may she wear them in good health; Pat Hall leaves her indigestion and a big bottle of pink Pepto Bismol; Michael Harrington leaves a non-slip carpet to be placed on the steps of the set of any future senior class play, all his arguments with Miss Bocchino to Greg Coolidge, and an unbreakable breakaway table to Peter George; Ken Hart leaves all his good marks and late homework assignments to Miss Gamble; Wayne Hills leaves all his English assignments to anyone who could possibly be foolish enough to want them; Robert Hogg leaves his "super-straight" image to anyone who can keep up the pretense as long and as well as he did; Steve Holloway leaves blue football cleats; Al Hope leaves his bill of charged lunches to Joe Breau; Dave Hooper leaves two left-footed marching shoes to Mr. M.; Kathie

WILL

Hyland leaves one lemon donut for breakfast every morning, a mini-skirt to Mrs. Webber, and Steve Delisle; Karen Ingram leaves her seat in Mr. Milley's class to any student more studious than she; Diane Irwin leaves dirty gym socks to Miss McCarthy, and cafeteria food to anyone who wants it.

Sandy Jaeschke leaves J. M. to a nice girl, whom he really deserves; Rick Keane leaves the left-flank, a broken test tube, and one slightly marked-up chemistry book to Mr. Krey when he returns; Dorothy Kendall leaves the dietetics class to anyone at all; Patricia Lapham leaves Mrs. Aldrich's class to Brenda Hunt, in the hope that at least maybe she can learn something; Richard Lipski leaves all the hit goal posts and drinking parties after the games to Tom Aprile and Ralph Decker; Lorraine LeMieux leaves Gale Boyden one starfish with a case of the nubs; Mary Lindmark leaves playing cards on the girls' room floor to some crazy junior, seminars to Mrs. Aldrich, and "quel types"; Dawn Lyman leaves her bright and unobtrusive lunch box; Laurie MacDonald leaves because she has to go to the bathroom.

Danny MacDonald leaves all his English books willingly; John MacKenzie leaves his spacious and unconfining two cubic inch locker # 676 to the creepy little freshman that takes his place; Rich Marasco leaves the shot-put to Lobster # 2; Julie Marr leaves Mrs. Aldrich's class to some poor deserving underclassman; George McGondel leaves his senior English notes (which did him absolutely no good) to anyone lucky enough to get Mrs. Mindell next year; Tom McGinley leaves an empty wine bottle and a handkerchief to P.N.; and a copy of "Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Sex but Were Afraid to Ask" to Mr. Cripps; Peggy McNamara leaves pranks, orange fights, and locker full of surprises; Joyce Mercier leaves the privilege of leading gym class to Jeanne Phinney; Mitch leaves a set of car keys and tutti-fruities to Bert Pilcher; Kathy Mugford returns the Adams Street guidance office to Mr. Cogan and Miss Abbood; Pat Nee leaves eight gallons of Walley Wall Wackers to any person who thinks he can stomach it; Anne Novak leaves Mr. D's class regretfully (and still wet behind the ears), and ten free dancing lessons to all unfortunate cheerleaders who weren't born dancers.

Mel, Pat and Mitch leave all the crew songs and jokes to Merri; Pat, Mel and Joyce leave their "Susan Opera" to the high school parking lot; Merrill, Steve and John Pie leave wild parties, that Wednesday night, and a keg of "Near Beer" to Dale; Karen Olson leaves all the birthdays, phone numbers, locker combinations and dirty jokes of locker # 443 to a very deserving sophomore, J.M.; Dave O'Rourke leaves one torn and falling apart track shoe to anyone in next year's freshman gym class who wants it; Maureen Quinn leaves a locker of a different color; Dianna Paulson leaves a Cave Hunter's Guide to the office machines room, and a pack of cigarettes to the 225 girls' room; Donna Paulsen leaves a "No Smoking" sign and a lit cigarette in the girls' room for any teacher who walks in and a dirty insult to Geno; Nancy Phillips leaves her locker to the junkman and a copy of "How to Mind Your Own Business" to all the gossips.

Susan Randell leaves Mr. DeGeorge's kiln to some poor deserving freshman to cook his or her pizzas in; Jean Reid leaves Mrs. Gershon a new, brushed wig; Richard Ricelli leaves, to the general delight of anyone who has ever known him; Tony Romano leaves his last pair of clean gym socks and anything that's left in his locker after graduating; Joanne Rooney leaves Mr. Cripps a pair of baggy pants and all her interesting books to Mrs. Mindell; Joe Scifo leaves Mr. Aylward's fondness for him to the next number 86; Mike Severin leaves a few old beer can tabs to good old Alan to sniff on up at camp and a bottle of Alka-Seltzer to Mrs. Mindell for the "rough" days; Wayne Sferrazza leaves the tie of "Joy" to Steve, Martha, Debbie and Ann; Janet Sullivan leaves the intricacies of the trampoline to next year's prime victim of circumstance; Tom Vayo leaves the "gay" memories of P.O.D. class to Mr. Cripps; Janis Welch leaves all her arguments with Geno to any unfortunate soul who gets him; Susan Willson leaves a long-line girdle to Mrs. G. and all the cigarette butts under the canopy to Mr. Garrett; Cip leaves all her discussions, arguments and battles with Tom McGinley to next year's senior class president and vice president.

Furthermore the Kazoo Band goes to next year's rowdy seniors; drafting IV leaves one fully equipped bathroom to future classes; the entire class leaves cast parties to any other class that can tie or beat its record and an unbreakable fence to Mr. Hyland.

Satisfied that this is all he needs, No-Man stands up, places the precious document in his pocket and walks forward with poise and assurance, confident that the world is now ready to learn of the secrets he has uncovered. In the background, however, he hears some faint, whispering noises. Before he closes the door forever, he listens carefully and is able to hear this message, "Well, Barney, this is another fine mess you've gotten us into . . ."

CLASS PROPHECY

The year is 1987 and I am an investigator. The past few months I have been researching a very unusual case. A major crime is rumored to be planned for sometime this year, but nobody knows when or what it will be. Our only clue is an old booster button from the Wilmington High School Class of '72. Having been a member of that class, I decided to investigate those class members whom I remembered to be most suspicious. Here are my findings —

Jim Fairweather, Dale Mather, Merrill MacInnes and Charlie Miller are four that can immediately be ruled out as suspect. One year after graduation, their draft number came up and they haven't been heard from since.

Jim Maxwell is a teller at the Middlesex Bank. He is still working his way through Merrimac College and would be too busy to do anything illegal.

Dave Kindred is a well established dentist who in his spare time, is a skate sharpener for the Bruins. His ploy, although unlikely, might be to put all the Bruins to sleep, steal their teeth and hold the teeth for ransom. This wouldn't be too difficult as most hockey players have portable teeth anyway.

Rosemary Bransfield and Bobby Hogg would seem unlikely partners in any business venture. They do, however, co-own a fashion shop-beauty salon complex in downtown Pinehurst. I think that Bob is the hair dresser and not the dress designer because their shop is noted for its unusual hair design known as "the bush." Along with their neighbor, Richard Allen, owner of the Richard Allen Barber Shop, they do not seem to warrant any suspicion.

Mary Lindmark is a famous x-rated, I mean x-ray technician. Noted people from all countries demand to be x-rayed by Mary Lindmark and no one else. She also seems to be completely innocent.

Dave O'Rourke is now a bartender at a bar in Switzerland. Mike Severin is the bouncer.

A strange group from the class formed a firm known as Doucette, Keane, Harrington, Buck and Finckle, Incorporated. No one I talked to knows exactly what the firm does but knowing that at one time they were all interested in science and that their headquarters is the only medieval castle in Wilmington, one can only speculate as to why there are explosions coming from the castle during the night.

Someone who might appear innocent is airline pilot, David McLain. But, is it just coincidence that his particular plane has been hijacked to Acapulco thirty-four times during the past year?

Ray Dudley and Jack Barry are the only two who chose to come back to the high school. Ray as a gym teacher and Jack as a math teacher. Everything about them appeared normal except that Ray, who as I remember didn't have a particularly low voice, now seems to growl when he talks, and Jack is still going to Mr. Kelley's math class every day.

There is a women's lib. group in Wilmington headed by Sandy Jaeske, Cheryl Campbell, Loretta Fredrickson and Sandy Farnsworth. Since the movement fell apart ten years ago, only the radical groups remain and anything can be expected from them.

Tom McGinley and Dave Stewart own an off track betting agency in New York and Massachusetts. The fact that it is only legal in New York doesn't seem to bother them.

The most sinister of all the groups were Rick Ricelli, Tony Romano, Rich Morasco and Tom Vayo, who head up the Wilmington Mafia. Don Ricelli is the leader, but they are now all being tried for the theft of the Kiwanis Club banner.

Arriving at a reasonable conclusion as to who could be the future perpetrator of this crime was difficult until I considered the possibility of a teacher as being the criminal. I noted that Italians are notorious for their criminal activities, and, although not all Italians make a living in crime, the obvious ones become obvious when they stress the fact that their ideology and manner is best above all. It also helps if they have an inexhaustable mouth which, at one time, made phrases such as, "Give it one of these," or "teenyboppers" at least in some ways, part of our everyday vocabulary.

I now have a prime suspect who I shall accuse of being Italian, which, if convicted should put him away for a long time.

We slouch in depression,
run with joy.
Swallow, squinting eyes,
half open, closed.
Friends share (Cindy, Brenda, Karen)
laughs, secrets, sorrows.
Autumn runs,
Winters' death.
Slouch in tears,
and scream for joy.
Nervous qualms suddenly can release
to forget our past,
preparing for the future.
